ITALIAN TRADE FAIR EVENTS

Once again, the strong cooperation between the Italian Regions, the newly-formed National Exhibition System Coordinating Committee and the Italian Exhibition and Trade Fair Association (AEFI), has led us to the publication of the 2011 Italian International Trade Fair Calendar.

During 2010, the world-wide financial crisis dragged on and the Italian exhibition system was hit by its effects, although it still succeeded in producing a good number of quality events thanks to the swift adaptation of its strategies to the ongoing structural changes.

Given today's difficult economic situation, trade fair events continue to be a fundamental driving force for the promotion and internationalisation of our distinctive national products and have confirmed their strategic importance within the Italian economy and their major direct and indirect contribution to national GDP.

This central role is confirmed by a glance at the 2011 calendar, which includes 195 international events across all Regions of Italy and covering 27 different product sectors, consolidating Italy's second place in Europe in terms of the size of its exhibition sector.

Each year international events attract about 100,000 exhibitors, of whom 28% come from abroad, and about 13 million visitors, 8% of them from abroad. In particular, 66% of the exhibitors and 23% of visitors attend business exhibitions. 25% of exhibitors and 32% of visitors attend mixed trade fairs, while consumer fairs top the scale in terms of visitors, with 45%, and attract 9% of exhibitors.

The trend in user numbers is thus still positive, especially compared to the figures for our main European competitors including Germany, France and Spain, which have suffered major reductions.

Italy's exhibition system is therefore one of the main engines for the country's economic growth, and for firms exhibitions confirm their position as the platform for contacting new targets, positioning themselves on the international markets, finding new business channels and consolidating their market credibility.

However, exhibition organisers currently need to look for new models that respond to an increasingly dynamic global economic situation, where fast reactions to processes of modernisation and change are key to success in an increasingly competitive environment.

The exhibition sector will therefore have to take up these new growth opportunities by using innovative operating tools and collateral services with high value-added, such as new forms of communication (internet and mobile phones), integrated logistics, events specialisation, on-line services, and services and events outside the fair venue to promote the entire local economic fabric.

The concept of the exhibition will have to evolve from the familiar format towards a future where exhibition areas will be smaller but events will be richer in experience-based contents, where companies offer not just goods and services but the experiences they deliver, creating emotions and sensations through their products.

However, fairs cannot develop and modernise without upgraded exhibition centres, new investments in infrastructures and certification tools, innovation in event contents, and above all partnerships and synergies between fairs and organisers to prevent over-fragmentation, to encourage a rationalisation of the exhibition business to effectively accompany firms along their paths to internationalisation.

Today, when we talk about fairs we are talking first and foremost about growth for our nation, which will and must grow by drawing on the roots of its industrial sectors of excellence and its manufacturing know-how while looking to tomorrow, a territory in constant evolution and a production system projected towards the future.

The commitment of the central and local government, especially through the National Exhibition System Coordinating Committee, aims to provide support for the greatest possible interaction between regional and national policies to strengthen the competitive levels of our exhibition system and indirectly of Italian companies themselves.

In this area, thanks in part to the efforts of the Region Coordination committee, Italy's leading exhibition centres will be able to count on ministerial funds made available to the exhibition sector by the Trade Fair Mobility and subsidies under the renewed Sector Agreement for the internationalisation of the Italian trade fair system between the Regions, the Autonomous Provinces, the Ministry of Economic Development, the AEFI, CFI (Fair trade Industry Committee-Confindustria Agency for Fair) and CFT (Association of Confcommercio for trade fair).

The vital internationalisation of the Italian trade fair sector requires joint efforts to enable the country to maintain and grow its leading role within Europe and internationally.

Regulation, facilitation, internationalisation and innovation are the four keystones on which the Government, the Regions and the Exhibition Associations will have to base their work to provide an effective response to the structural transformations of Italy's exhibition system.

Groupings and alliance strategies between exhibition companies and organisers at the national and international level will play a central role for the future of the Italian exhibition system in a context which we all hope will be one of recovery, thanks to the promotion of exhibition brands and the management and organisational know-how built up over the years.

With this commitment, and thanks to the hard work of all those involved, I hope and trust that the presentation of the 2011 Italian international trade fair calendar will be only the first step towards a new season of successes and fruitful business opportunities.

Gian Carlo Muzzarelli
Councillor for Productive Activities
Emilia-Romagna Region

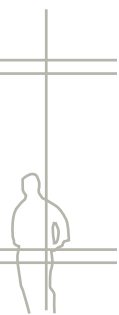

I feel greatly honoured to present the 2011 Italian International Trade Fair Calendar, and view this as an excellent opportunity for looking back at what we have achieved together. In spite of the economic crisis which began to take hold in 2008, our exhibition system has not suffered any major setbacks, and has reacted with impressive speed and dynamism. AEFI, the Italian Exhibition and Trade Fair Association, and its members (small, large and medium-sized exhibition centres) have started to work better as a team, and to provide the "critical mass" in terms of exhibition capacity that has won approval world-wide, focusing increasingly on quality and excellence in its events. The system-wide collaboration and cooperation already noticeable for a number of years have been reinforced. We have conducted industry-specific studies that have led members to further rationalise their activities, with the aim of more intensive process and product innovation, greater consolidation of the exhibition centres' relationship with their regional areas and even the country as a whole, improvement of the general level of the services delivered to our customers, and an increase of the expertise of our human resources.

We have pressurised central and local government to reinforce dialogue, leading to the Sector Agreement for the internationalisation of the Italian trade fair system between the Ministry for Economic Development, the Regions and Autonomous Provinces and CFI and CFT, which continues the partnership between these institutions to maximise the synergies between public and private actions to support the internationalisation of the exhibition system.

With these activities and on these bases, I am proud to present the 2011 Trade Fair Calendar, which I consider as opportunity-rich as always, and which I strongly hope may mark the gateway to a new, better decade. I look forward to seeing the member exhibition centres working to strengthen their relationships and act in union for common aims, while protecting the specific characteristics of their local areas and their interactions with them.

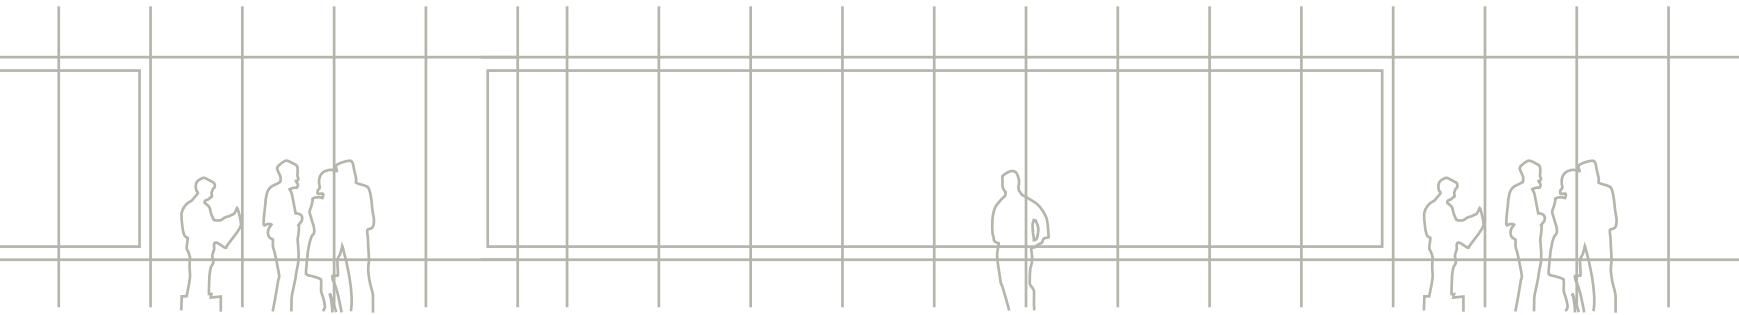

Finally, I would like to thank all those who I have had the privilege of meeting and coming to respect, in my years as President, in their various respective functions, in the foreground or the background, within the various government bodies and the member organisations, and extend my most sincere farewell to everyone who has contributed in any way to the realisation of all the AEFI's activities and projects.

Prof. Raffaele Cercola
